A single father of five and grandfather of six is about to receive a gift he’s dreamed of for years: stability. Mountain Country KQSC is helping him get there.

The U.S. Army veteran, Rick, is this year’s selected future homeowner of Pikes Peak Habitat for Humanity’s (PPHH) Veteran Build. His twin daughters — whose enthusiasm feels more squared than doubled — are already picking out what color to paint their bedroom. But before the family gets a set of keys or even sees a roof, the build must be funded.

Mountain Country (107.3-FM/1530-AM), a family owned and operated radio station in Colorado Springs, joined PPHH as a community partner early on. The station has already donated a large amount of airtime and employee efforts to raise funds. Now, they’re taking their support to the next level.

Local morning show co-hosts Dave West and Lorelei “Lo” Harris will attempt to make or break five world records in a week, between Dec. 11-15. The duo will make all of their attempts on-air and live on Facebook, and each world record will be unveiled and announced the day of. As they perform the world record activities, they will be encouraging listeners and viewers to donate to the Veteran Build and help Rick become a homeowner.

Mountain Country promises to deliver an amusing, exciting, and perhaps even terrifying week of entertainment. The radio station hopes to substantially boost the fundraising efforts of the PPHH Veteran Build the week of Dec. 11. Tune in to listen in Colorado Springs on 107.3-FM or 1530-AM, or listen live at MyMountainCountry.com
